DEATH.

On 30th September, ALBAN MOUNTNEY, Jackson, Esq., of H.M. Naval Yard, Hongkong.

The delivery of the Daily Press from this office commences on Monday morning at 10.30, and six days later, on the 10th of October.

The Daily Press

HONGKONG, OCTOBER 3rd, 1871.

As mentioned on Saturday, several, if not all, of the Missionary gentlemen in Hongkong intend to reply to the memorandum on the subject of gambling in the Colony, which the Hon. Mr. SMITH sent in to this Government in his capacity of Registrar-General and Protector of Chinese.

Under the general bearing of that memorandum it would perhaps be difficult to add much to what has been already said by Mr. WILSON, in the letter he recently addressed to this paper. The arguments which it contains are rapid in the extreme; and it must be obvious to the most casual observer that the simple object of the memorandum, like that of the Hon. Mr. PARNWELL's, on which we had occasion recently to make a few remarks, is to support Sir RICHARD MACDONNELL in the policy which he has so persistently maintained in regard to the Government of this Colony.

At the very least, it is safe to say that had the Hon. Mr. SMITH discovered, or imagined that he discovered, that the native opinion was in the other direction, that is, that it was strongly opposed to gambling, he would not have thought it necessary to send in a memorandum to Sir RICHARD MACDONNELL. The idea, however, of the Hon. Mr. SMITH undertaking to say what is the general opinion among the Chinese in Hongkong, is something very amusing. In what way we should like to know did he ascertain all this? If he were in the habit of securing himself in the dwellings of "high and low," and catching what they said among themselves, and what they said among their secret societies, and ascertain all the shifts and shuffles that are going on day by day when any local question is being agitated, he might provide himself with somewhat scanty materials for commencing to form an opinion on the subject, and it would then be still a very great question whether the matter would arrive at an accurate conclusion. The manner, however, in which native "opinion" is usually ascertained—and we make every little doubt indeed that such was the case in this instance, as we see no other means at the disposal of the Registrar-General—is for a map to enter into conversation with his favorite teacher, who is thoroughly acquainted with the views of his questioner, and who at once gives the answer which he thinks will be acceptable, without either knowing or caring whether it is a general opinion or not. We can state from absolute experience that we have been told the general opinion of the native population in this manner fifty times, and never yet found it to differ from our own. At the present moment, we are told that the general native opinion is that the Registrar-General is not suited for his post. We, however, attach no more importance to this than to the fifty other opinions of the same kind which have been given to us. Let a Chinaman know that you think in a certain way, and ask him for the general opinion of the natives, and, as Huxley took the cue from King John to murder Prince Arthur, he will be a dull celestial if he does not know what "opinion" it is you want. This kind of interference of the Registrar-General's office with everything in the Colony, from madships to diplomatic negotiations, is getting simply intolerable. It is bad enough that so much power should be placed in the hands of one man on the spot; but if part of the duties of the Registrar-General's Department is to give opinions to support the Local Government in any measures they may choose to adopt, and if opinions of opinions are to be taken as grounds for continuing such abuses as the Gambling system, it is clear that no restraint whatever can be put upon any action which the powers that be may choose to adopt.

As regards the arguments in the memorandum—if arguments indeed they can be called—there is, as before noticed, little to add to the admirable comments made by Mr. WILSON. The idea that a memorial is vitiated because it contains one signature that may be open to question; or because the whole of the memorialists are not actuated by a single motive, is too absurd to be seriously discussed. Some men may object to gambling on purely moral grounds—and those who do so have many arguments on their side which require something more to refute them than any ill-natured sneer at Missionaries—others again may from their disposition, and the inclination of their minds, object more strongly upon administrative grounds regarding the system as one likely to lower the tone of the Government Service, and to bring its officers into contempt; a third class may object chiefly to the indirect use to which the system has been applied, that, namely, of causing the Government to rely upon the Gambling Revenue to discover crime in place of organising a proper detective service. All those grounds, and many others of the like nature may be valid reasons for signing a petition, although the people holding them may differ upon many points the one from the other. The fact indeed that men of different views unite in condemning the system, so far from detracting from the force of the memorial, adds greatly to its weight, and this fact has been fully proved by the petitions sent to the Home Government.

But the last argument adopted by the Registrar-General—that the memorial is to have less weight attached to it, because it expresses the opinion of Missionaries—is perhaps the most astounding. Surely men of the knowledge and experience of, say Dr. LEE, and others of not equal rank as scholars, of equal weight as persons acquainted with the Chinese, and in daily intercourse with them, are as much entitled to be heard on native opinion as the Hon. Mr. SMITH. Possibly, their motive in entering into the petition may be different from that which influences Sir RICHARD in wishing to maintain the Gambling system—but a desire to see their country acting in accordance with Christian and enlightened principles, can scarcely be considered very greatly to weaken their authority. As a matter of fact, we hear that they have had little to do with the native petition; but the little they have had must surely be considered rather to strengthen than to weaken it.

We are informed that it is the intention of the Hon. Mr. SMITH to enter a joint protest against the action of the Colonial Secretary in demanding from the Hon. Mr. RYAN an explanation of the words he used in the Council-room. That there are grounds to raise the time of action there can be no doubt, and we can only hope that it will prove thoroughly successful. There is no question that the Colonial Secretary has committed himself by the steps he has taken, and it is to be hoped that he will defend the Registrar-General, and it will now remain to be seen what the end of this affair is to be. We are informed that there is no doubt that the information in the document spoken of by Mr. RYAN is not in actual copy, but found its way to Canton; and it remains to be seen in what manner it got there. We believe, however, that it may perhaps be possible to show this as well; but Mr. RYAN is not likely to be so easily won over because he asked a simple question on the subject in Council.

Much anxiety is felt concerning the fate of the Yi-tsun, which, it was reported, cleared out of this for Fochow on the 30th August. Nothing whatever has been heard of her since, and it is feared she must have gone down in the typhoon of the 25th September.

With reference to the comments made yesterday concerning the recent affair on board the Andes, we are informed that two of the Malay deserters from the vessel have been arrested, and that there are hopes that the others may be got hold of. It is possible, therefore, that further light may be thrown on this extraordinary matter.

The weather yesterday showed some signs of a typhoon, and towards evening the wind increased very considerably, but the barometer did not fall very low for this time of year. At 6 p.m. it was 29.81, and this morning at 6 a.m. 29.55, and 8 a.m. 29.50, and 10 a.m. 29.45, and 12 a.m. 29.40, and 2 p.m. 29.35, and 4 p.m. 29.30, and 6 p.m. 29.25, and 8 p.m. 29.20, and 10 p.m.
